BISHOP NICHOLS ON NEW PRAYER BOOK

The second of the talks on the American prayer book of the Episcopal church was given by Bishop Nichols during the evensong meeting in St. Andrew's Cathedral last evening. His subject was "Features of the Morning and Evening Service."

Bishop Nichols spoke on the flexibility of the services and the powers set forth in the rubrics for the lighting and shortening of the same. The morning and evening prayer, the Litany and the Communion can be used separately but none used habitually alone, leaving others out. Sometimes there are combinations made of the different services. Services for special occasions are provided for, but there are occasions not provided for in the book. On such occasions the Bishop uses his discretion as to what shall and what shall not be used. Nothing is left open for the individual to use what he wishes.

The Bishop said there was no way of shortening the first part of the morning service on Sunday unless the Holy Communion is to immediately follow. He could see no reason why Christians should give God the end of their time by a desire to have the services shortened up and finished in unseasonably haste.

The Bishop concluded his remarks with reference to Bible reading in the United States. He said it was falling into desuetude, or was haphazard. The Episcopal church provides for a systematic reading of the Bible in its services by authorizing the reading of certain portions under the authority of "Here beginneth the first (or second) lesson, etc." It was explained why some objected to the use of "hell" in the creed. The rubric provided that it could be left out while the creed was being said, if desired. However, he could not remember, during his entire ministry, of leaving it read without the word. When the church said Christ descended into hell, it meant that he went to the place of departed spirits, because he had a human soul.

New and Strict Pure Food Bill

Washington, April 2.—The Senate Committee on Manufactures today reported a new bill for preventing the adulteration, misbranding and imitation of foods, beverages, confectioneries, drugs and condiments in the Territories and regulating interstate commerce in such articles.

It prohibits under fine and imprisonment interstate or foreign commerce in adulterated, mixed, misbranded or imitated foods or drugs, and gives the Secretary of Agriculture power to inspect and analyze original packages of products and to certify to the proper United States District Attorney any violations of the act.

Germany to Extend Growth of Cotton

Berlin, March 24.—The Colonial Office is encouraging the movement to establish cotton growing in Togoland, East Africa, as a permanent native industry, on a large scale. A meeting of experts held at the Foreign Office approved as satisfactory a recommendation as to the suitability of Togoland made by an expedition sent to investigate the question.

It was decided to send to the United States a commission of agriculturists to study cotton cultivation and collect data with a view to starting experimental stations in Togoland.

Chinaman Hurt.

While assisting in the work of turning over the new scow in Been's mill yard yesterday afternoon, the Chinese local carpenter received injuries to both legs. The man with half a dozen workmen were turning the scow over for the purpose of having it painted and tarred. Suddenly the props gave way and the scow fell to the ground. The other workmen succeeded in escaping but the head carpenter was caught under the heavy mass. He was removed to the hospital.

Ze' das Dance.

The Zondas gave a very enjoyable dance in Progress Hall last night, the fun lasting until midnight. The colors of the club—purple and white—were very much in evidence. Flags were also used in the decorations. A large streamer bearing the name of the club, was stretched across the musicians' platform. The music was furnished by the Iolani Quintet. None but Hawaiian airs were allowed.
